

The Irving Fox Award

The Irving Fox Award recognizes outstanding contributions to the sustainability of natural and cultural resources in northwest BC. The award can recognize a specific project or a lifetime contribution. Winners of the Irving Fox Award will receive a certificate and public recognition for their contribution, and are encouraged to highlight the award in their curriculum vitae.

1. Who is eligible?

Any individual or group who has made an outstanding contribution to the knowledge and sustainability of natural or community resources in northwest BC. Some portion of the work or its application must have been undertaken in northwest BC. Eligibility is not restricted to residents of northwest BC.

2. Who can nominate?

Anyone, including those whose work is to be recognized.

3. What should be included in a nomination package?

The nomination package should include:

- a) name(s) and contact information of the nominator(s);
- b) a description (1000 word maximum) of the individual, team, or project and why the person, team or project is worthy of distinction;
- c) contact information for at least two references (these may include the nominator(s), but should include at least one external reference); and
- d) a bio or c.v. of the nominee(s) may be included (optional).

4. How will the recipient be chosen?

Nominations shall be evaluated against the following criteria:

- a) contribution to understanding or achievement of sustainability in northwest BC in any of its ecological and human dimensions. For guidance, please refer to the Mission, Vision and Values of the Bulkley Valley Research Centre as outlined in its Strategic Plan; and
- b) contribution to increased national and international awareness of the natural resources of northwest BC, or of research and management pertaining to those natural resources.

NOTE: The committee may choose not to designate a winner every year if, in its opinion, none of the nominations meets the high standard expected of the award.

5. Timeframe

Nominations should be sent to info@bvcentre.ca. Deadline: May 24th, 2024. The Irving Fox Award will be presented at the Bulkley Valley Research Centre's Annual General Meeting held in June.